MONIQUE LOVERING

Monique spent many years working internationally in publishing as an Art Director for high end glossy magazines. She was based in London for 10 years where she had her own design business as a freelance Art Director as well as a studio where she painted. Whenever possible she would travel to Italy to be inspired by its history and culture. After several journeys basking in the culture and art she moved to Palermo as this was the place that influenced her work the most. There she set up a studio in a old palazzo which became home to her daily practice as an Artist. 2009 She decided to return to Australasia and is based in Sydney.

Artist Statement: In my current obsession with ‘home’, I have concluded that my home traverses four different places - Australia, New Zealand, England and Sicily. As I divide my time between these countries, my notion of home is less a physical residing place and much more a place of connectedness. Home then becomes a place of comfort, a place where you feel free to be yourself. These ‘homes’ have irrevocably changed the way I view the world.

England is my birthplace, and the fabric of my earliest memories. The other three ‘homes’ influence my reading of nature, history and culture.

While in New Zealand, I sense the ‘rawness’ of Sicily, and the connection people have to the land. I use similar colours when describing emotions and experiences; it’s about finding the human qualities beyond the facade. My love of Sicily is instinctual, as is my connection with New Zealand. Australia holds memories of my childhood spent in Western Australia as a ‘ten-pound-pom’ new immigrant from England. I recall days travelling with my family in the harsh desert, dust and more dust. For now, Australia is where I live and work.

TARA BURKE

Tara Burke is a Sydney-based ceramicist who creates functional and non-functional objects.

Tara's work embodies the Japanese philosophy of 'wabi sabi', which embraces imperfection. Tara is particularly interested in the way design is incorporated into everyday life, and much of her work is intended for use. Tara creates objects using a wheel as well as by hand building, working with a range of materials from rough raku clay to smooth white porcelain.
